Pooping problem is a topic that hardly discussed. It is basically caused by irritable bowel movements and a common reason of painful defecation and can be worse if not taken seriously. However, there is nothing to feel embarrassed about. Here are a few simple homes remedies to decrease the irritation: Lemon: Lemon can be used to cure constipation. Drinking a glass of warm water with lemon and a bit of salt in it not only purifies the intestines, but also helps in smooth passage of stool. Fiber: Eating fiber rich food as dried beans, prunes, and figs can really work wonders. Such eating acts like a sponge thereby preventing stomach bloating. Raisins: Raisins are also high in fiber and help a lot in aiding digestion and relieving constipation. Triphala powder: Consuming Triphala powder acts as a great laxative. Just mixing one teaspoon of it in warm water and a bit of honey and drink it just an after wake up empty stomach in the morning. It will certainly work amazingly. Oranges: They are big source of Vitamin C and a orange can give 116.2% of the daily value of Vitamin C which gives immediate relief from constipation. Never ignore nature's call: Yes, last but certainly not the least, one should never ignore a nature's call as it is like inviting trouble for future. The Broca's area named after 19th century French physician Pierre Paul Broca has known for more than one fifty thousand years as the command centre for social speech, containing vocalization. Now, scientists at the University of California Berkeley and Johns Hopkins University in Maryland are demanding this long-held statement with new confirmation that Broca's area actually switches off when we talk out loud. Lead authors of the Study Adeen Flinker said, "Broca's area shuts down during the actual delivery of speech, but it may remain active during conversation as part of planning future words and full sentences." Neuroscientists have conventionally organised the brain's language centre into two main regions, one for perceiving speech and one for producing speech. "This finding helps us move towards a view that Broca's area is not a centre for speech production but rather a serious part for integrating and coordinating information crosswise other brain regions," Flinker said. The discovery has major implications for the diagnoses and treatments of stroke, epilepsy and brain injuries that result in language impairments. Flinker concluded that the results could help us advance language mapping during neurosurgery as well as the assessment of language impairments. A complete health and medical based news DTMT NETWORK Emerging Antimicrobial Resistance Society (EARS), a non-profit making organisation which has established a vast network of healthcare institutions and research centers across India for the surveillance of bacterial strains resistant to antibiotics, conducted an awareness walk in Delhi. The walk was organised as part of the organisation's nationwide Awareness Week on Antibiotic Knowledge and Education (Awake) campaign for the first time in India from November 16 to 23 to promote the rational use of antibiotics. Displaying placards and banners and raising slogans like "Use antibiotics wisely and be healthy" and "Take action today to save tomorrow", EARS volunteers, joined by doctors, pharmacists and medical students, marched their way from Sir Gangaram Hospital in New Delhi to City Hospital and Kolmet Hospital in Karol Bagh and back covering a distance of 2.5 km. Drug Today Medical Times (DTMT) also joined the AWAKE campaign. The walk was flagged off by Dr SP Byotra, chairperson, Department of Medicine, Sir Ganga Ram Hospital. EARS also organised a webinar (seminar on the web) for doctors on the antibiotic stewardship programme. Around 3,000 doctors from all over the country were invited to the webinar, which was presided over by Dr Chand Watal, head, microbiology department, Sir Ganga Ram Hospital. Dr Pankaj, vice-president and Dr Arvind Singh, coordinator of EARS were also present during the awareness walk. Touted as the third largest drug producer in the world, the Indian pharmaceutical industry grew at an estimated compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 13 per cent till recently. This huge pharma growth ensured India's entry into the top five emerging pharma markets' club. However, the pharma sector, of late, is passing through a rough patch. There has not been any significant investment in the sector nor has any new pharma company come up in the recent past. Over and above, there has been steady decline in the export as well as import of drugs. What is more, foreign investors are coy to invest in Indian pharma sector for reasons not far to seek. What could be the reason for this unexpected turnaround? Why is pharma industry not doing business the way it used to in the past? The slump in the pharma business has more to do with governmental policies than the market forces. How else could one explain the sudden downfall of such a flourishing industry without any warning signals soon after unsolicited statutory intervention? Changing pricing and regulatory environment and tightening of Foreign Direct Investment (FDI) are at the root of the slowdown in the industry's growth rate. In its eagerness to tap the resources of the pharma sector, the government through its populist drive tried to stretch the pharma too far without taking into consideration sustainability in fiscal terms. The result is there for all to see. What is required is serious review of the so-called populist policies carried over the last two years. This populism did more harm to the pharma industry in particular and the healthcare system in general than good. But what we see is perpetuation of the mistakes perpetrated over the last couple of years. For more information:- Click Here
